

Allowing users to make and receive cellular telephone calls while flying is a horrible idea and would create huge flying phone booths in the sky. Nothing is all that important that won't wait until the aircraft lands. Or they can use the onboard phone services in front of each seat. Thanks,

Nicholas Iammarino, Professor of Health Sciences, Rice University, Houston